For Immediate Release
Oct 5, 2012

Detectives Arrest Suspect Seen Fleeing from Bank Robbery

Arrested Suspect: Wesley Andrew Fox, W/M, 09/24/85, Transient
Location: PNC Bank 3801 49th Street North, St. Petersburg

At approximately 5:57 p.m., undercover detectives with SPPD’s CASE Unit spotted a suspicious male subject approaching the PNC Bank.

As he approached the front entrance the subject appear to place something over his face and enter the bank. After a few moments the subject, later identified as Fox, emerged and began running in a easterly direction to a near-by apartment complex parking lot where he was seen by detectives going to a red Toyota Corolla.

Believing that the Fox had possible robbed the bank, detectives moved in and detained him before he could drive away. They found Fox in possession of a handgun as well as large sums of cash and bank personnel quickly confirmed that a robbery had in fact taken place.

Fox had apparently pulled his shirt up over his face as he entered the bank, produced a handgun and began demanding cash from the tellers. After collecting a yet undetermined amount of cash, Fox fled back out the front entrance where detectives followed and arrested him.

No injuries were reported during the incident.

Fox has been charged with one count of armed bank robbery.

Information released by Mike Puetz, michael.puetz@stpete.org
###